Soft, Warm Fashion Scene . . . Combines Practical Care with Lush Fabrics

New fall fashions for women concentrate on soft, brushed fabrics. Many fabrications use a touch of rabbit's hair or angora in polyester blends. For others, brushing, napping, shearing or sueding gives the warm cozy feeling.

Colors lean toward royal wine shades, burgundies and chablis. The Chinese influence introduces red and Persian blue. Lodan and yellowed greens, rust, gray and black figure importantly. Winter ices in lavender to green give a change of pace and teal continues in smoke and heather tones. For subtlety, colors are woven or knitted, often as tone-on-tone and no-pattern patterns. Ombre, the gradation of tone, continues in importance and is new as a ground for prints and stripes.

Borders are coming on strong for the BigShape dress and pared-down chemise. There are more dimensional plaids. The newer stripes are broken or simply a suggestion of stripes. Others are done as foulard (plain or twill weaves printed with small figures on dark and light backgrounds) or floral configurations. Something new is faux unis, or false one. For example, a solid effect is actually made up of bits of color.

Styling takes two directions: big, loose, swingy shapes and body-hugging slim lines. Often in separates, the two looks are combined for a newly-layered interest. An overdress is added to pants and a shirt topped by a sweater. Pants are as popular as ever and sometimes worn under either slim, clingy or BigLook dresses and tunics. Or a BigTop goes over pared-down pants or slim-look skirts. The Chinese influence for tops includes quilting, side-wraps, toggle and frog closings and lacquer colors. Shorter, cropped blazers top cuffed pants.

There are longer skirts in wrap - arounds and swishy rounds. The opposite slim lines allow plenty of free action with box pleats giving skirts the slim look. In dresses, body-hugging sweater dresses and Sirens are newsy and the chemise is popular in a pared-down version. All come in tactile fabrics.

In fact, fabrics are the most exciting aspect of the fashion picture. Luxurious fabrics frequently offer the practical feature of washability. So reading the labels beforehand is beneficial.

Along with the emphasis on soft, supple hand and lofty surfaces, there are many blends and look-likes. A texturized polyester looks and feels like suede. Synthetics simulate cotton. Others feel like wool. Heavy single knits resemble double knits, such as shiny-matte combinations of nylon and polyester. A double knit that looks like a woven is made of 75% polyester, 15% linen and 10% rayon. In sportswear woolens, the greatest interest is in blends with high polyester content - 80% polyester/20% worsted, for example.

In general, knits are either lightweight interlocks and slinky single knits or bulky, coarse-gauge sweater knits. Watch for chenille yarns in bulkies, polished, often boucle yarns for tight, curly textures and polyester carpeting yarns for the newest effects.

Slick surfaces are very good this season and emphasize pointelle patterns and open work designs. Dull-shiny looks are achieved by using a variety of yarns, frequently in a jacquard construction.

There is a marked trend towards wovens. Chino, poplin, serge and gabardine are showing up in various weights and constructions. Some are coated to add sheen. Others shine from the fiber itself. Many are brushed for a warm hand. Textures and slubby weaves including homespun looks continue in popularity.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Watermelon Rind Pickle

7 lbs. white meat of melon
3½ lbs. sugar - white
1 pint vinegar
½ teaspoon of oil of cloves
½ teaspoon of oil of cinnamon

Cut off rind and pink of melon and cut white meat in cubes. Cover with hot water, bring to a boil and cook until it can be pierced with a fork, not too soft. Drain.

Make syrup by boiling sugar, vinegar, cloves and cinnamon. Pack melon in stone jar and pour syrup over melon. Let stand overnight. Pour off syrup and heat for two mornings; the third morning heat both melon and syrup together. Put in hot jars and seal. Makes 6 pints.

Maryland 4-Hers Visit In County Attention

During the past week, five 4-Hers and their chaperone from Frederick County, Maryland have been visiting and living with 4-Hers here in Appomattox. The visit completes a two year 4-H Interstate Exchange program (last summer, Appomattox 4-Hers traveled to Maryland).

The purpose if the Exchange program is to provide 4-H members with an opportunity to travel, meet new friends and learn about a county 4-H situation that may be different from their own. If also provides an opportunity for the teenager to live with a host 4-H'er and their family during the exchange program.

This year's exchange group from Maryland includes (along with their host 4-Her and host family): Wayne Spurrier (Joe Ford - Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ford and family), Richard Axline (Baxter Parris - Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Parris and family), Susan Nagle (Vicki Glover - Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Glover and family), Margie Murphy (Cynthia Hix - Mr. and Mrs. William Hix and family), and Anne King (Pam Moore - Mr. and Mrs. James Moore and family). The group chaperone was Mrs. Connie Nagle who stayed with Mrs. Frank Lively and her family.

The Exchange group took part in on-going 4-H activities and several special events during their week's stay in Appomattox. Among the events and activities were a 4-H Swine Tour, Day Camp, a special trip to Kings Dominion, a tour of the Appomattox Historical Park, Holiday Lake 4-H Camp and other special side trips provided by the individual families.

Appomattox 4-Hers have conducted previous Interstate Exchange trips with Hardenon County, Tennessee and Elk County, Pennsylvania.
